Taro is staying at his American friend Nancy's house in Los Angeles. They are shopping in a shopping mall in the city. Taro wants to buy a tennis racket for his sister in Japan and Nancy gets a sports jacket.

Nancy : Here we are in the shopping mall, Taro. It's so crowded early in the morning.

Today is Saturday. It's the weekend, so many people come and enjoy shopping.

Taro : And they look very busy cleaning and arranging goods in every store here.

Nancy : You know, every store has special items and, what is more, they are very kind to customers.

It's so comfortable people spend a day hanging around and doing window-shopping.

Let's enjoy shopping, Taro.

Taro : Here we are in front of a sporting goods store. The store's name is, -O.LYMPICS. It reads Olympics. Right?

Nancy : Yes. This store is world-famous. Even famous athletes often come.

Taro : I wish I could see them.

Nancy : Shopping comes first. Let's go up to the second floor where you can find a special section for rackets.

Taro : On the counter there are many kinds of tennis rackets and they are so colorful- red, white, yellow and blue. I wonder which color Junko likes most. Let me see.

Nancy : I suppose your sister will like a white one, because in her pictures I saw her dressed in white. You take it downstairs.

Taro : Good. I'll buy a white racket for her. Have you found your favorite sports jacket, Nancy?

Nancy : Look, this is the sports jacket. I ordered it a week ago.

Now, Let's go to the check-out counter to pay.

I have three fifty-dollar bills and five ten-dollar bills, so in total I have two hundred dollars with me now. The price of the jacket is eighty dollars and the racket is seventy dollars. I will pay one hundred fifty dollars for both of us.

Taro : Thanks. At noon in a restaurant I will hand you seventy dollars.

Nancy : OK. I would like to have a good lunch with you in a beautiful restaurant.
